

ODDS AND ENDS

At the meeting of March 20, 1954, on motion of Claude A. Rankin, the Pulaski County Historical Society voted to extend honorary memberships on an exchange basis to the University of Arkansas library, the Washington County Historical Society, the Arkansas Valley Historical Association, the Grand Prairie Historical Society, and the Newton County Historical Association. The University of Arkansas library had already requested a complete file of REVIEW. This library contains one of the finest collections of Arkansiana in the state.

Number six in the Bulletin Series published by the Washington County Historical Society (see page 9, this issue) will appear soon. It is the story of the Greathouse family, written by Captain Jack M. Greathouse of Fayetteville. This bulletin will be of interest to members of the Pulaski County Historical Society, as the Greathouse family was among the earliest pioneer families in Pulaski county, and includes such family names as Hinkson, Magness and Hardin. The bulletin is illustrated, and is attractively bound in paper covers. It may be obtained for $1.00 from Tom Feathers, secretary of the WCHS, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The Arkansas Valley Historical Association has as its current project reports on the pioneer families of Russellville and the surrounding area. Several papers have been read to the organization, and others are planned for the immediate future. This project corresponds with the Pulaski County Pioneers series which appears in REVIEW. At present, the Arkansas Valley organization has no plans for publication of the reports.
